1. I ask [redacted] yesterday whether or not he had been invited back to review the work which [redacted] is performing in the development of a computer for ELINT processing. He said that he had not. I suggested that we would appreciate such a briefing sometime after the first of the year, perhaps the second or third week in January. [redacted] will proceed to make the appropriate arrangements.

2. [redacted] who did the briefing for their last visit, will probably be available to make this briefing also. [redacted] believes that the computer which was scheduled to have been operable on 5 December for a stockholders meeting was, in fact, ready. It is a part of QRC-213 development for the Air Force. At the present time, processing is being simulated at WADC using a 7094 computer. [redacted] indicated that the Navy has asked for a briefing with the intent of incorporating it in some of their new systems and the Army intends to incorporate it into their STAR LIGHT system.

3. [redacted] will contact me later for a definite date.
